you will be able to turn the cube faster, recognize cases or quickly, and just in general gain a better understanding of the cube. what should i practice? So if youeAAAre getting stuck, chances are you arenAAAt practicing enough. Of course, we want to know how to practice to find the most efficient way to improve. This can be done by practicing a lot! Work on the cross. Lubricate your cube too eAAA a decent method is using silicone spray, but using silicone oil is better. Joined Aug 4, 2008 Messages 211 Location Indiana, U.S. WCA 2008HONG01 I'd say try to get up to 9 seconds or so. This means solving the last layer in 4 steps, which consists of guiding the last layer in 2 steps (2 look oll) and permuting the last layer in 2 steps (2 look pll). estimated time: 2-4 weeks ----- step 2 current average: 1: 00-1: 19 average goal: 40-49 seconds learning 4 look the last layer (4ll) dwindling the time of your last layer (at about 25 so times will get worse temporarily, but after a few days of practice, they will significantly improve! Practice your f2l a lot and never give up! Estimated time: 2-4 weeks ----- step 4 current average: 30-39 seconds average goal: 20-29 seconds now, learn the rest of the algorithms pll. cubes like dayan zhanchi and dayan qunhong v2 are excellent: allow the spin effortlessly and the cut corner to work to improve your speed. oe tricks with fingers (this will speed up a lot so times.) only oa patterns/blocks to recognize, will be easy later. reactions: DR Detonation joined to 23 September 2008 messages 1,212 wca 2008Hal02 promple test. in two, how to get faster in specific sequences of movements and how to reduce your overall tps to resolve. by the first, I would suggest trying to learn new fingertricks. So, again... how do I improve that? As for the general curves per second for a resolution, I know it sounds cliché, but it slows down and looks forward. It's easier to look forward and then go fast instead of going fast while trying to slow down your pauses. I'd do this until every resolution felt like a big finger trick.
